A nine-mile scenic railway path from Aylsham to Wroxham for walkers & cyclists

BURE VALLEY PATH

Although the path surface may be unsuitable for wheelchairs during bad weather, provision is made to accommodate them on the Bure Valley Railway trains; please telephone (01263) 733858 for details. Disabled parking, toilets and access to station facilities including refreshments are available at Aylsham and Hoveton stations.

This enjoyable route passes through some of Norfolk's most attractive countryside and pretty villages, many of which are worth a visit. It is an additional path continuing after the Marriot's Way ends in Aylsham. Car parking and access to the path are available at various points (see map). While the more energetic may be able to tackle the whole route, railway halts are provided at Brampton, Buxton and Coltshall where the train will stop and pick up, or put down, passengers on request, including bikes (subject to space availability). So, why not take a train for some of the route and walk or bike the remainder? Remember that cycle hire is available locally through Broadland Cycle Hire (see contacts for details).

The Bure Valley Path is a nine-mile route through the picturesque Bure Valley between Aylsham and Hoveton and Wroxham. It follows part of the route of the former Great Eastern Railway, which is now the narrow-gauge Bure Valley Railway running from Hoveton and Wroxham station, on the National Express Bittern Line, to Aylsham.

Step back 50 years and you would have passed a scene like this along the route...

- Take care when approaching walkers and disabled users - remember that some people may have impaired hearing or sight.
- Take extreme care when crossing roads, particularly with children and especially at the Aylsham bypass crossing.
- When crossing ramped bridges, do not attempt to ride over them. Walk alongside your bike and push it up the ramp.
- Always be courteous and considerate to other path users.
- Respect other land management activities, such as farming and forestry.
- Keep erosion to a minimum, please stay on the path.
- Please do not lean on the adjoining fences.
- It is advisable to wear a helmet, appropriate clothing and carry a repair kit and lights.
- Take care when cycling downhill.
- Match your speed to the surface, your skills and to the presence of others.
- Ensure that your bicycle is safe to ride.
- No driving, motorcycling, horse riding, shooting or camping is allowed on the Bure Valley Path, with the exception of motorised wheelchairs (used by people with a disability). The route is not a public right of way, but members of the public are invited to use it at their own risk.
